

Vivian Klinck - Since the first day I touched an oil painting, I was drawn to the medium just as a fly is drawn to a flame. My memory of that touch stays with me to this day, which creates the energy to create my kind of art.

I was educated at Michigan State University where I received a major in business and a minor in fine art. I have been painting for most of my life, but have developed my own style in the last 25 years. As of this writing, I have created over 550 pieces. My art is carried at such galleries as "Art at the River" in Ontario, Canada, and "Plumtree" on the outskirts of Detroit, Michigan. I also have paintings in the collections of the Middlebury Museum and the Morgan Horse Museum in Vermont.

In addition to the galleries that have carried my paintings, I have received awards at Gold Rush Days, and have shown my art at many Arizona art exhibitions. I am a juried member of the Wickenburg Art Club and the Arizona Art Alliance. I spend my winters in Arizona and my summers in Ontario and never lack for subject matter to help me develop my continuing interest as an artist. I am a colorist at heart and include portraits, still life and landscape in my inventory.

I hope that some future artist will run their hands over one of my paintings and feel the excitement that so inspired me at a young age.
